

AGRICULTURE AND FOOD SECURITY SEMINAR

Food security and agriculture depend on each other: without sustainable agriculture, food prices rocket, fueling food insecurity; the agricultural sector's long-term health depends on the sustainability of farming methods, taking into account long-term productivity, environmental impact and profitability. Improved land and water resource management can yield healthy, climate-resilient agricultural ecosystems fostering biodiversity and overall economic and social well-being. This requires meaningful collaboration between various stakeholders, including government, industry players, the farming community and environmentalists. The Agriculture and Food Security Seminar draws up a road map to achieve this goal.
